

HAVE CONFAB THIS MORNING

President Has Senator And California Representative At White House Today.

KEEP SILENCE ON THE PROPOSITION

Believe Japan Has Made Formal Objection To California's Proposed Anti-Jap Laws.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, D. C., Feb. 8.—It is known that a most important conference was held this morning at the White House relative to the anti-Japanese attitude of the western legislatures between the President and members of the California delegation and of the state department.

United States Senator Frank R. McInt, of California, and Representative Julius Kahn, of San Francisco, were summoned to the executive mansion early this morning. They met with the President, Secretary of State Bacon and Assistant Secretary of State O'Laughlin.

The situation in California was particularly discussed and it is expected that another important statement will be made public tomorrow or some radical action taken relative to the matter, which is considered of national importance.

Following the conference none of those present would make any statement and absolutely refused to discuss the matters which had brought them to the White House on the President's hurry-up request.

The fact that the state department was represented has excited more speculation than any other feature of the whole discussion and it is believed that Japan has made some official request of the Washington government relative to the affair.

That the California situation was the chief topic of conversation is certain and it is thought here that Japan has signified how she regards the proposed California legislation that will be taken up on Wednesday next.

The intimation is also conveyed that important messages have been received from Ambassador O'Brien, our representative in Tokyo, portraying the actual feeling of the Japanese government on the matter.

It is well understood among the prominent officials in Washington that Secretary Cortelyou has accepted the presidency of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York.

In the House conference this morning the report on the urgent deficiency appropriation bill agreed to without debate. The measure now goes to the President.

Senator Stephenson himself was disinclined to talk on the political situation today, and the only statement which he had made is that his expense account was being prepared and that it would be filed at Madison within the next forty-eight hours.

"You can say authoritatively from me that my expense account will be filed very shortly," said Mr. Stephenson.

LEGION OF HONOR CROSS AWARDED

Awarded by President Fallieres of France to Louis Dazy for Heroism in Hospital.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Paris, Feb. 8.—President Fallieres, on his own initiative and with his own hand, has conferred on M. Louis Dazy, a medical student, the Cross of the Legion of Honor, for a splendid act of self-sacrifice. M. Dazy, who is the son of a prominent French surgeon, was assisting his chief in a Paris hospital in an operation on a patient suffering from purulent pleurisy. A drop of pus splashed and entered the young surgeon's eye. He knew that the matter was virulent poison, and that dangerous infection must inevitably ensue unless instant treatment were applied.

But he knew also that if the operation in which he was assisting were interrupted for a moment it would be at the risk of the patient's life, no other surgeon being at hand to take his place. He therefore said nothing, and continued his duties until the operation was successfully performed.

Only then did he have his eye treated, but it was too late, and violent infection set in. Acute inflammation followed, lasting six months, and causing great pain. At length the eye had to be removed. President Fallieres, hearing of the incident, immediately decided that the young surgeon should be decorated without consulting his ministers.

The celebration will reach a climax Friday with four great mass meetings held simultaneously. SUES FOR $500,000 INSURANCE ON LIFE

Case of Mrs. Guale M. Burdette Against Four Companies is on Docket for Trial at Muskogee, Okla.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Muskogee, Okla., Feb. 8.—On the docket for trial before Judge Campbell in the United States circuit court here today is the famous suit brought by Mrs. Guale M. Burdette, for the recovery of $500,000 insurance upon her husband's life. The case has attracted attention in insurance circles throughout the country, because of the large amount of the policies involved and the peculiar circumstances surrounding the case. Burdette, who was a wealthy pioneer merchant of Creek county, was the victim of a mysterious assassination at Buffalo in 1906. His body was found in a well on his farm. For a time it was believed Burdette had committed suicide, but an investigation resulted in an assassination theory being officially adopted. Nevertheless the insurance companies have not considered the evidence of assassination sufficiently strong and have heretofore declined to pay the policies on the life of the deceased, amounting in all to half a million dollars. The defendant companies are the Fidelity and Casualty Company of New York, the Mutual Life of New York, the Provident Savings Life Assurance Society of New York, and the Penn Mutual Insurance Company of Galveston.

LEMP DIVORCE TRIAL BEGINS

SISTER-IN-LAW MENTIONED IN THE COMPLAINT.

BY "THE LAVENDER LADY"

Husband Claims to Have Found Interesting Reading in One of Her Letters—Exposure at Palm Beach.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 8.—The much-discussed suit for divorce instituted by Mrs. Lillian Mandala Lemp against her husband, William J. Lemp, Jr., the millionaire brewer, was called for trial today before Judge Hitchcock in the circuit court. The social prominence of the Lemp and the sensational character of the charges and counter charges brought by the wife and husband have attracted wide attention to the divorce suit. The trial promises to be one of the most sensational of its kind ever tried in the St. Louis courts.

Mr. and Mrs. Lemp were married about ten years ago and have an eight-year-old son, William J. Lemp III. The marital troubles of the couple date back several years, though the wife's suit for divorce was not brought until about a year ago. In her petition for a divorce Mrs. Lemp charges her husband with extreme cruelty and with undue attentions to other women. Mrs. Bert Evill, sister-in-law of Mr. Lemp, figures prominently in the wife's allegations against her husband.

In her reply to the charges made against him Mr. Lemp states that his trouble with his wife began with a quarrel some four years ago, when he approached her on her housekeeping methods and remarks she is alleged to have made about his mother. He declares that an unsigned letter in his wife's handwriting, which he found in a drawer of her library table, and which Mrs. Lemp claims was a decoy to catch her husband reading her correspondence, caused him to employ a detective to watch her at Palm Beach, Fla. This letter, according to Mr. Lemp, was addressed to "my dear pal," alluded to him—apparently Lemp—in terms of hatred, and said: "I am coming hunting next week, and I wish to heaven he would never return; I am completely worn out and God alone knows how much longer I can stand this loathsome bondage. Do telephone me when you can, as I usually answer the phone now."

Lemp denies taking Mrs. Bert Evill to gardens or theaters; says he has known her fifteen years; that she frequently visited his home by his wife's invitation, and he thought it proper to ask her to take a drink because she was his sister-in-law.

Lemp also states that his wife's extremes in dress and her profligate for the wearing of lavender, caused her to become a conspicuous figure whenever she appeared in public and resulted in her being generally known as "the lavender lady."

An alleged anti-nuptial contract is expected to play a prominent part in the trial. Lemp alleges that in this agreement made before their marriage, his bride, now the plaintiff, gave him entire control of their children's religious, moral and collegiate education, which he charges she violated by having their son secretly baptized as a Catholic.

SUPERIOR WANTS TO PENSION TEACHERS

Board of Education Asking Legislature to Indorse Its Plan for Pensioning Instructors.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Superior, Wis., Feb. 8.—The Superior board of education is asking the state legislature to indorse its plan for pensioning teachers to the extent of passing a law making it possible to put the plan in effect in cities of this class. Measures have been introduced at Madison and it is expected that they will pass. The board proposes to pension all teachers who have served in the city schools here for a continuous term of at least 25 years. The pensioners are to be taken care of from funds contributed to by both teachers and board. The teachers, however, will not feel the effect of the yearly drain on their salaries as it is the intention of the board to raise the scale of wages an amount sufficient to cover the assessment charged against any teacher electing to come under the pension plan. The board would also levy each year an extra amount to go into the fund as the board's share.

BIG BENCH SHOW IS TO OPEN IN GOTHAM

Aristocrats of the Canine World Will Be on Exhibition at Madison Square Garden Tomorrow.

New York, Feb. 8.—From tomorrow until Saturday the aristocrats of the canine kingdom will be on parade in Madison Square Garden. The shows of the Westminster Kennel club are always well worth witnessing, but this exhibition this year promises to be more interesting than any of its predecessors. The entry list is the largest on record, and this despite the fact that the Canada quarantine reduced the number of entries from that country by nearly seventy-five per cent. There are more importations than for many years, and the notable increase is in St. Bernards and Collies, the former having returned to favor. The total number of entries, not counting the foxhound and beagle packs, is 3,077, as against 3,025 last year. The Boston Terriers lead the list with a total of 215 entries.

DISCUSSED THE NEGRO QUESTION

REV. —TIPPETT—DEALT—WITH PHASES OF PROBLEM.

REV. WILLMAN DELIVERED

A Very Interesting Sermon to His Congregation at Trinity Episcopal Church Yesterday Morning.

Yesterday morning at Carroll Memorial Methodist church, Rev. J. H. Tippetts, pastor, dealt with the negro question, his topic being "The Negro: Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow." In his discourse, Rev. Tippetts told of what had been accomplished in the past in civilizing the negro and what might be done. The negro, he says, will need the help and guidance of the white man for possibly a hundred years to come, until he can gain confidence in his own kind. The text of the sermon was taken from the sixth chapter of the book of Isaiah, the eighth verse. "He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doeth the Lord, and require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God."

"Hundreds of times," said Mr. Tippetts, thoughtfully people question in their minds what the future of the negro is. The real negro question is not to be settled by the southern states alone but must be undertaken by all America. "No man knows what the best of the negro was before he was brought to America as a slave, and no man can tell what his future will be. There are, however, great hopes for his future, based on what has been done in the past. Compare the ancestors of the negro of the present day—the first negro slaves—with the colored man that now is, and you have some faint idea of what God can accomplish. "All the men who were freed by Lincoln emancipation act, had in 1865, been acquired through slavery. Slavery hurt the white man but it civilized the negro. What the slave owners did, was done from selfish motives, but it raised the level of the negro. At the end of the Civil war, the negro had gained the right to a good deal of the English language; he could grow crops; he had some knowledge of our great republic, and knew something of what it is to be a Christian. All that the negro may become in this country, God has laid the foundations for in slavery.

"With what little he had of learning and of the English language, the negro, when he received his liberty, sought after more, and forty-four years afterward, one half of the people in the south were able to read and write. The negro has also gained in property since 1865. At that time most of the negro possessed no land, but by thrift and economy they have acquired property, until today the south there are 746,717 farms whose proprietors are negroes. The territory in all of these is as large as all of England and Wales and half of Scotland. There are now many colored men who forty-four years ago had nothing and now are the owners of their own homes. Some of the negroes of today are as cultured as the white men of the north.

"The negro suffered greatly from the over-crowding of his northern friends. When the war was over the negro was not yet ready for enfranchisement, and I think that liberty should not have given them emancipation immediately. In the course of time he should have received the right to vote, but in 1865 he did not understand the method of government. The average negro had two notions about the ballot. The first was that it was a token of peculiar affection, and the other that it was chiefly designed for them to keep their old masters down. As a result of this feeling, the 'Kludux' and other societies rose up.

"The mind of the negro was not on his rights, rather than fitting himself for them. A great deal of what was said to him by the friends of his emancipation to enjoy his rights without seeking to make himself a man.

"The colored man can be educated and can go far but how far nobody knows. He is now in danger of over-education. His learning capacity does not keep pace with the clamor of his wants. His weakness is for accumulating money by the short method. The immediate need of the negro today is to find out what he is fitted for. He does not need college education, but an opportunity to earn a livelihood. The natural instinct of the negro is to speak and to gratify him by turns to the pulpit and to teaching. But the point has been reached where something else besides preaching and teaching must be found for him to do, or else there will be a surplus of teachers and preachers in the south.

"The schools of the south are now teaching the colored man the trades and the professions. They are instructing them to be lawyers, physicians, mechanics and other trades men.

"The negroes are eager for education, much more so than the whites, and he should be taught useful things by which he may earn a livelihood. "As a citizen, the negro is rough, but with all his shortcomings he has done more than what the white people expected of him. As a voter, he has caused tremendous trouble. As a citizen, he is only an apprentice. Laws cannot make him what he is not, and force from without cannot develop him into a good citizen. The old master taught him and guided him, and showed him the things he ought to know. Helping him now means bringing him to be able to stand on his own feet. The white man, in self-protection, cannot now have him alone to follow and way ahead. They must go on training him and guiding him for a hundred years or more. They brought him out of Africa and put him in his present condition and they must now finish what has been started. They must put their shoulders under the burden and lift it up."

At Trinity Church.
At Trinity church yesterday morning, the Rev. Henry Willman defined the meaning of the word "gain" as St. Paul understood it. "Gain, with St. Paul, was success in winning souls," said the Rev. Mr. Willman. "In the way of monetary gain, St. Paul might have urged his universal right to receive a million-tonance for preaching the gospel. This he did not do. "Paul advised against running one's course eagerly and without fighting in-actively. Christian life, he said, is a precarious one on many accounts. One is apt to lose sight of the goal. It is true that everyone has a goal inasmuch as they hope to find heaven ultimately. Ask anyone what their hopes are and they will reply that they hope to reach heaven. But they probably have no adequate conception of what heaven is. Vaguely they regard it as a place of rest; a place for meeting old friends; a place where sorrow and crime and pain and shame will be no more. But St. Paul's heaven may be more briefly described: Where Christ is. And, obviously, the first requisite in reaching that heaven that Paul conceived is to know Christ here on earth. "Many of us dispose with him here below. Some do not know anything of him, while others who do know something of him—even though they lose sight of their goal. He should figure in all our plans and judgments.

"I am not your enemy vaguely, was the substance of Paul's words, and keep within it, with your goal over in view. Think what it means to do this—how unworship, how charitable, and how unselfish that man must be who runs not vaguely, who keeps within his vision, and who always has his goal in view. "And I must turn to the second admonition: Let us not fight ineffectively, beating the air. "Many of us suppose that our consciences reveal our infirmities, but if our consciences are strong they will not always prove effective. Also in the case of the carefully regulated life of a man who kept himself free from stain and who has, over time, childhood, regarded conscience as supreme, it often happens that some particular virtue he has still omitted to attain.

"Which of us have not been told in attempting to conquer a besetting sin? Again, for want of believing that the holy spirit may be obtained for the asking, many of us have not obtained it. "Lent is now approaching. It is not far off. As rules during Lenten time, the following are proffered: To run the right course in the right way and to fight strongly and unflinchingly to fight the good fight with all our might."

ANGEL OF DEATH
TAKES ITS TOLL

BENJAMIN F. DUNWIDDIE PASSED AWAY ON SATURDAY EVENING.

A JUST AND UPRIGHT MAN

Janesville Loses an Old and Respected
Citizen—His Friends and Earnest and Wise Counselor.

Almost at the threshold of the new year Janesville is called upon to mourn the loss of another of its best and noblest citizens. It had been known for some time that former Judge B. F. Dunwiddie's days were numbered. He had been unconscious since Thursday afternoon and Saturday evening, shortly before ten o'clock he quietly breathed his last. Only those who knew Judge Dunwiddie well could appreciate his great unselfishness, his capacity for heroic self-sacrifice, his intellectualty, his high ideals and his complement confidence in the world about him as a good world where right must ultimately prevail. He was a student lost in meditations. A loving father, a kind husband and a wise counselor of his friends. His death removes a noble spirit from our midst and one who will be sorely missed.

THE LATE B. F. DUNWIDDIE could appreciate his great unselfishness, his capacity for heroic self-sacrifice, his intellectualty, his high ideals and his complement confidence in the world about him as a good world where right must ultimately prevail. He was a student lost in meditations. A loving father, a kind husband and a wise counselor of his friends. His death removes a noble spirit from our midst and one who will be sorely missed.

Was Sixty Years of Age.
Benjamin F. Dunwiddie was born July 18, 1848, on a farm in the township of Deering, Green county. His father, David Dunwiddie, who died in June, 1895, came to Wisconsin from Dayton, Ohio, in 1845, with $100 and the horse on which he made the journey, as his sole worldly possessions. The latter's father before him was one of those sturdy Scotch-Irish pioneers who knew the vicissitudes of the frontierman's life, having, in company with his wife, made the journey from Delaware to Ohio, on foot, at an early day. Judge Dunwiddie's mother was Cynthia Mitchell and she, as well as his grandmother on the paternal side, were of German descent.

Early Difficulties Overcome.
During his youth he attended the country schools and was for a time a student in the Brookfield high school. But the greater part of his preparation for college was attained without the aid of instructors, while working on the farm. In 1870 he entered the University of Wisconsin, graduating from the College of Letters and Sciences and receiving the degree of A. B. in 1874. In the meantime he had taken up the study of law and was graduated from the law department in 1876. Chief Justice John Winslow, and Judges Beardsley, the Iowa court, and Judge Sherrin of the Iowa supreme court, were his law teachers. The funds which enabled him to go to college and to complete his education were earned by teaching in the country schools.

Career As a Lawyer.
After graduating from the law department, the young attorney entered the office of former Chief Justice John B. Cassaday, then a practitioner in the Janesville bar. In 1876 he entered a law partnership with Philip Nelson. Subsequently he practiced without an associate. Then the law firm of Dunwiddie & Goldin, which afterwards became Dunwiddie, Goldin & Wheeler, was formed. In 1889 Attorney Dunwiddie was appointed to complete the unexpired term of the late Judge Bennett on the bench of the Twelfth judicial circuit. He was thereafter elected for a full term and served the people faithfully, efficiently, and better than they knew, in that high office until his retirement on January 7, 1907.

Tried Equitable Case.
During his 26 years of practice at the bar, Judge Dunwiddie came in contact with the ablest lawyers in the state and received an extensive and varied training and experience in his chosen profession. As judge, his rulings were quite universally recognized as fair and just and the records of the supreme court show that body of his decisions. He not only devoted himself to a careful and painstaking investigation of all matters brought before him in his own court, but from time to time, presided, at the request of his colleagues, on the bench. In most of the other circuits in the state. In 1894 he was chosen by the governing parties to hear the case of the Equitable Life Insurance Co. vs. Commissioner Zeno M. Host, one of the most important actions ever tried in Wisconsin and involving a judgment of $30,000,000. The opinion which he rendered at the conclusion of that trial was widely commended by eminent jurists in this state and elsewhere.

Active in Church Work.
Soon after coming to Janesville, Judge Dunwiddie united with the First Baptist church and almost from the beginning was one of the most active members of the congregation. Over twenty years he was superintendent of the Sunday school and trustee. He was also prominent in the wider organization, serving as first vice president of the Baptist State association and presiding over many of its conventions.

The Immediate Family.
In June, 1883, he wedded at Darlington Miss Nellie Gray, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Gray who now reside in Janesville. The children are two sons—Attorney Stanley G. Dunwiddie of this city and Alan Dunwiddie, at present a student at Wayland Academy, Beaver Dam. The late

County Judge Brooks Dunwiddie who died at Monroe in December, 1906, was an uncle. Of sisters and brothers there are four: Mrs. J. B. Humphrey and Miss Flora Dunwiddie of Janesville, Mrs. T. W. Goldin of Kansas City, Mo., and L. P. Dunwiddie of Delavan.

Health Undermined.
It was the strain of long and bitter personal opposition in his campaign for re-election in the spring of 1900 that undermined Judge Dunwiddie's health and prepared the way for a stroke of paralysis. This was followed by other strokes, and since January 7 he had been doomed to a death which he had accepted with a calm and heroic courage.

Funeral on Tuesday.
The funeral will be held from the home on Madison street at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the Rev. Joseph C. Hazen officiating.

PORTRAIT UNVEILED
IN SEMINARY CHAPL

Impressive Exercises at Evansville
School for Unveiling of Likeness of Professor Coleman.

Evansville, Feb. 5.—A beautiful and enlarged portrait of the late Prof. J. E. Coleman was unveiled with impressive ceremonies in the seminary chapel this morning. The exercises began at nine o'clock and were attended by many of our citizens. Appropriate addresses were given by Miss Hope Pierce of North Chicago, New York; Rev. W. H. Winters, a student in '93 and '94; Rev. B. L. Dyer of the class of '93; Miss Anna Andrews, '81; Miss Alice Kinnear '91, and Rev. D. O. Dietzman of Highland Center, who gave the final presentation speech. Prof. Webb made the speech accepting it in behalf of the faculty and board of trustees. Prof. Coleman was the first principal of the seminary under its present management, and during the thirteen or fourteen years which he held the position he worked unflinchingly to build up the school and did much to bring the institution up to its present state of prosperity. He was universally respected and much beloved, especially by the students. The picture is a gift from the Plattville district of the Free Methodist conference, who were prevailed upon by District Elder Dietzman to present it to the school.

A company of friends numbering about fifty were very pleasantly entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Dwyne at an at-home last evening. Readings by Miss Myrtle Millsbaugh, Miss Ella Hubbard and Mrs. Burr Tolles were much enjoyed by the guests, and a spelling match and guessing contest helped to pass the evening enjoyably. The following people from Brookville were among the guests: Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Ellis, Misses Martha Miller, Vera Ford, Ethel Main, Fern Jackson, Noble Smith, Myrtle Millsbaugh, Grace Hilt, Sadie Hilt, Daisy Baldwin, Agnes Hogan, and Lavina Stewart; and Messrs. Floyd Pillar, Harry and Theodore Carless, Henry Holt, R. S. Gilles, Lynn Millsbaugh, Delbert Smith, Verne Ellis, Marion Adamson and Floyd Smith.

Mrs. L. A. Baldwin is entertaining her father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Peach of Fulton. Mr. Peach has been receiving treatment in a hospital in Chicago for some time and his acquaintances will be very glad to learn that he is much improved.

H. A. Langenue returned last evening from a business trip to Chicago. After supper meeting on Wednesday evening the Campy club enjoyed a delightful after which the party were entertained at an oyster supper by Mrs. D. Q. Grabbil and Mrs. Robert Hartley at the Grabbil home.

Mrs. Fred Gillman, who has been confined to her home by illness for more than a week, is better.

Mrs. J. W. Ames left yesterday for Chicago, where she will spend a week with relatives.

A conference of the southern Wisconsin district of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints will be held in this city Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 6 and 7. The meetings will be held in the city hall.

Mrs. Amanda Wallis was the guest of Mrs. T. W. North from Wednesday (Fri.) Friday.

About twenty-five guests were entertained at a 4:30 dinner last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Johnson.

Mr. Vale of Beloit was a business caller here yesterday.

There was a large attendance at the Missionary meeting at the home of Mrs. J. P. Porter yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Amanda Wallis favored the company with several vocal selections. Refreshments were served and a good time had.

HAS SUGGESTIONS FOR RIVER CLAMS

J. P. ALDÉE WRITES ON FUTURE
INDUSTRY FOR JANESVILLE.

PREDICTS A GREAT FUTURE

For Both Pearl Hunters And Clam Fishers in Janesville And the Vicinity.

J. P. Aldée, who each spring makes his departure to the Mississippi river where he spends the summer months in clam fishing and pearl hunting, has written the following interesting article on the labor and future of this industry. He also sees a great future for Janesville in this same line of industry. He writes as follows:
Mr. Editor:

My attention having been called to an article by Florence L. Clarke, of McGregor, Iowa, on clam fishing and pearl hunting, and as the article contains much that is true and instructive, and also some things with which I can not agree, I would not the privilege of quoting some of her articles, adding my comments on the same, and also some suggestions regarding clams in Rock river.

She starts out with the assertion that it has been discovered that the clam, in the beginning of its existence, is a parasite of or on certain kinds of fishes. This is a statement with which I do not altogether agree, the learned Professor Curtis and LeFevre to the contrary notwithstanding.

I most firmly believe that the clam may, and does, have an existence entirely independent of any species of fish, but it is altogether likely that the spawn may, and do in some cases—perhaps in many—become attached to some of the fishes, who may be rooting about in the mud where the clam spawn has been deposited, even as the spawn becomes attached to any other substance which may come in contact with it.

And now in regard to protection and encouragement of the clam industry. In the first place the claims are now holding their own against all who are reaching for them, and are, and have been, on the gain for the past three or four years. But I am heartily in favor of the industry being encouraged and protected, in any manner that would prove a real protection, such as is now afforded the fish industry, hatching and stocking the rivers, in proper places, and protecting the small claims until they become large enough for use. I will now introduce a part of Florence L. Clarke's article, as follows:
"The work is of immense importance."

MYSTERY IN MURDERS BAFFLING TO POLICE

Ottumwa, Ia., Feb. 8.—The police have arrested and questioned ten suspects but have failed to establish the connection of any of them with the murder of Miss Clara Rosen whose body was found Saturday.

Joseph Hopkins, a negro employed as government meat inspector at the Morrill Packing Company, failed to explain his whereabouts sufficiently the night of the murder. His efforts to conceal his movements have made the police suspicious. He did not work Saturday, a fact which has just come to light. A search warrant has been issued to trace, if possible, the diamond ring and brooch which were stolen from Miss Rosen at the time she was slain.

It developed that Miss Rosen had repeatedly told her employer that a very black negro had been following her for some time and had stared at her from street corners where she was bound to pass.

While it is now believed that a fiend attacked the dead girl the theory of a jilted lover's guilt is not abandoned. Sensational developments along the latter line may be expected.

Witnesses before the coroner's jury stated that they saw a man in a black overcoat and cap in the vicinity of the crime Friday night, but could not tell whether he was a negro. He was seen to hurriedly cross to the opposite side of the street to keep from being recognized.

At Oskaloosa, two more suspects are in jail. Chemists are making an examination of the blood found on James Martin's shirt and coat.

Bloomington, Ill., Feb. 8.—Mrs. Charles Coons, was found dead in a coalhouse yesterday. Rudy Wagner, who started home from a dance with her, is held pending an inquiry into the cause of her death.

Dayton, O., Feb. 8.—With the exception of microscopic examination of the stomach in search of possible traces of poison, the final autopsy on the body of Elizabeth Fuldhart of Vandalia, O., Dayton's last murder victim, yesterday failed to reveal the immediate cause of the girl's death. There were no traces of choking or fractures of the skull which may have been fatal and evidences of which were apparent in the other five tragedies in which girls were the victims of a fiend.

Mrs. Edward Hatfield was attacked by a man at the rear of her home last night. She was rescued by her husband. The assailant escaped.

That the murders of six women in Dayton were committed by a single individual is the theory of Dr. Charles H. Clark, former clinical director of the government hospital for the insane at Washington and now superintendent of the Cleveland State Hospital for the Insane.

MEET TO TALK ON TARIFF.

More Than 2,000 Delegates Expected at Convention in Indianapolis.

New York, Feb. 8.—Announcement was made yesterday that the convention of the national tariff commission, which will be held in Indianapolis on February 10, in an endeavor to bring about the establishment of a permanent bipartisan tariff commission, will be attended by more than 2,000 delegates, including representatives of manufacturing concerns, many congressmen and financial interests.

Owen of Oklahoma, Norris Brown of Nebraska, Thomas R. Marshall, governor of Indiana; Congressman Bourke Cockran, J. W. Van Cleave, president of the National Association of Manufacturers; Henry R. The big steamship lay at anchor all night in Gravesend bay and waited until daylight before attempting to negotiate the Ambrose channel leading out to sea.

MEN SLAY EACH OTHER IN FIGHT OVER WOMAN

Both Fire Fatal Shots as They Battle in Leadwood (Mo.) Street.

Des Moines, Mo., Feb. 8.—In a pistol duel Saturday night in Leadwood, John Hughes and George Ketcherwilde killed each other. Their bodies were picked off each other by citizens after the firing had ceased. Hughes was carried to the home of his sister and he died 20 minutes later. Ketcherwilde was dead when his friends reached his side.

The shooting was in front of the home of Mrs. Adams, a widow, with whom Ketcherwilde had boarded. He saw Hughes talking to Mrs. Adams and because of jealousy, he is said to have abused Hughes, who went to his home and returned with a revolver.

Both men began firing at the same time and at so close a range that their bodies fell across each other. Each body received five bullets. Coroner Young held an inquest today.

NATION TO HONOR LINCOLN.

Plan to Make Birthday American Holiday Stimulated by Centenary.

New York, Feb. 8.—The progress at Washington of the measure to make February 12 a national holiday has stimulated interest in the centenary anniversary of Lincoln's birth, which will be observed next Friday throughout the country. Strictly speaking there can be no national holiday, for in this matter the states make their own legislation and this measure if it becomes a law will apply in a local sense only to the District of Columbia, the territories and federal institutions.

The most notable gatherings on Friday will be at Hodgenville, Ky., where President Roosevelt will lay the cornerstone of a memorial hall on the old "Lincoln farm." At Springfield, Ill., there will be addresses by William J. Bryan and Ambassador Bryce and Ambassador Jusserand. President-elect Taft will speak at a banquet at New Orleans and Vice-President-elect Sherman will make an address at the chamber of commerce dinner at Pittsburg, Pa. At noon United States Senator Lodge will address the Massachusetts legislature at Boston. In New York city there will be several Lincoln dinners of a notable character.

CAUGHT AFTER 21 YEARS.

Illinois Man, Who Escaped Prison Is Modern Jean Valjean.

Marion, Ill., Feb. 8.—Another "Jean Valjean" case, with its sorrowful details of a respected citizen being brought low and a home broken by a crime thought long forgotten, has occurred near here.

Jack D. Isham, who for the last 10 years has been a prosperous and highly respected farmer, and who owns many broad acres about eight miles east of here, is the man. Yesterday when returning from church he was arrested. He escaped from the Tennessee penitentiary in 1888. The shock of his arrest was so great that he fainted. After being placed in jail here he confessed, abandoned hope of regaining freedom, sent word to his family to sell his farm and other property and leave. He told how he escaped from the state's prison and roamed around the country before settling down on the farm.

Religious Convention in Chicago. Chicago, Feb. 8.—Chicago will be host this week to the greatest convention of religious educationalists that has assembled here since the days of the world's fair, the occasion being the sixth general convention of the Religious Education association, an organization which was brought into being through the initiative of the late William H. H. Harper. The general theme to run throughout the various sessions of the convention will be "Religious Education and Social Duty."

Girls Hold Up a Railroad.

New York, Feb. 8.—Armed with a six-shooter, Miss Winifred Noone of Sandy Side, N. J., is holding up the Erie railroad. Day and night she and her niece, May Morgan, guard their little home amid the marshes. Twice single-handed they have driven the railroad employees off the premises. On the first occasion a gang of laborers had laid a line of railroad ties right up to the side of the house and the next time they were about to run them through the front yard.

Woman Foils Train Wreckers.

Reading, Pa., Feb. 8.—A bold attempt at train wrecking was discovered on the Schuylkill and Lehigh branch of the Reading railway near Krampton, this county, yesterday by Mrs. L. H. Lehart, wife of the former agent, who discovered a piece of railroad iron with a large stone tied to either end fastened to the track. She dragged them away just before a train arrived.

SECRET SERVICE MEN NOT NEEDED, HE SAYS

Secretary Garfield Declares Land Fraud Probe Has Not Been Hampered.

Washington, Feb. 8.—That the interior department in its investigation of land frauds has suffered by the legislative limitation on the use of the secret service force of the treasury department was not admitted by Secretary Garfield when he recently appeared before the subcommittee of the house committee on appropriations.

Mr. Garfield's testimony has just been made public. "The subcommittee is drafting the sundry civil appropriation bill, in which the secretary hopes to see incorporated an item of $500,000 for fighting depredations on public timber, protecting public lands, etc." Secretary Garfield in his testimony said that the $500,000 appropriation asked for, twice as large as that asked for last year, was needed to unearthen frauds committed years ago.

The secretary said that the public land laws had not been vigorously enforced in former years, although it is difficult to fix the responsibility for such laxness. He absolved congress from blame.

MINERS BAR WORD WARS.

Adopt Peace Resolution Before Adjourning Indianapolis Convention.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 8.—After selecting Indianapolis as the place for holding the convention next year the convention of the United Mine Workers of America, which has been in session for three weeks, adjourned Saturday. The chief action taken Saturday was the adoption of a resolution declaring against a recurrence of the factional disputes which characterized the contest for offices in the campaign just closed. The union committee adopted the wage scale agreed upon by the anthracite districts at a conference held at Scranton, Pa., last year.

President Lewis, announced yesterday that the charter of the Hudson, Ind., Miners' union would be returned and that the differences between the officers of District No. 11 and the national union authorities had been settled.

DRYAN WAS NOT HURT.

Brands as False Report of Auto Accident in Florida.

Jacksonville, Fla., Feb. 8.—William Jennings Bryan emphatically denied yesterday the story sent out Saturday night regarding the alleged automobile accident near Tarpon Springs, in which it was said he was badly injured and was under treatment in a Tampa hotel.

Mr. Bryan was not hurt by his cousin, William S. Jennings, and taken to his home. Upon reading the report of the accident he stamped it as false, saying that he was in Lakeland until noon Saturday when he left for Deland, speaking there Saturday night and leaving there for Jacksonville. He is in perfect health.

A FAMOUS BEAUTY SPECIALIST

Gives Advice to Women Lacking in Energy and Vitality.

Thousands of women are using toilet preparations unsuccessfully. Cosmetics fail to improve their thick, muddy complexion or to banish the pimples, blackheads and crow's-feet.

No wonder. Their trouble lies far deeper than the skin. They have bad blood, and bad blood in 99 per cent of the cases arises from inflammation of the mucous membrane. Their blood is filled with poison which is certain to break out in unsightly humors and blotches—while pale, drawn faces, deep creased eyes, stooping shoulders and weak backs complete the story of suffering and despair.

Inflammation of the mucous membrane is catarrh. Banish catarrh and complexion will clear as if by magic, pain vanish, eyes will brighten, flesh become plump and shoulders erect. Perfect beauty goes only with perfect health, and perfect health for women can only be obtained through REXALL Mucosa-Tone, the one positive and permanent cure for catarrh.

Aime Swift, 44 W. 26th St., New York City, the most famous beauty specialist in the world and an accepted authority on all relating thereto, has this to say of Mucosa-Tone:

"I can strongly endorse the claims made for REXALL Mucosa-Tone as a cure for systematic catarrh. Its tonic effects are remarkable. It builds up the strength and restores vitality. If women who are tired and run down, lacking in energy and vitality, will use Mucosa-Tone, they will realize it as I do for its strengthening and healing qualities."

REXALL Mucosa-Tone works through the blood, and acting directly upon the mucous cells—the congestion and inflammation of which are the sole cause of catarrh—causes them to expel the poison and to resume their natural functions. Thus the membranes are cleansed, the blood purified and revitalized.

We know that REXALL Mucosa-Tone will cure every form of catarrh, no matter where located, or how long standing, or by what other names it is known. We guarantee to refund your money if you are not satisfied with the vigorous health and clear complexion it brings you.

Gen. Fredericks, former governor of Nizhni-Novgorod, was convicted of negligence and corruption.

Night Riders Make Threat. Wavercross, Ga., Feb. 8.—Excitement was caused at Pompano, a small station 30 miles northwest of Wavercross, yesterday morning when it became known that five negroes employed by the Atlantic Coast Line railroad in building a new depot at that place, had received warnings from self-styled "night riders" to leave the community forthwith or death would be meted out to them.

Believe Two Are Drowned. Council Bluffs, Ia., Feb. 8.—Thomas Kendall and John Hansen, prominent young men of this city, are believed to have been drowned at Lake Manawa yesterday afternoon. WHY ADVERTISE?

Some firms advertise to impress competitors and to attract the attention of their friends. Verily they have their reward.

Other firms advertise in imitation of their competitors or are forced into it through competition. They, too, reap some pecuniary benefit.

Neither class touches the bottom. The basic reason for advertising is to stimulate trade. Sane business men know this—that is, in theory. In actual practice many merchants advertise because the other fellow does.

If there were only one large store in this city it would pay him to advertise. It is safe to say that the hundreds of dollars spent annually in advertising in Janesville is keeping Janesville to the fore.

Advertising is co-operative. The merchant who spends a hundred dollars to advertise spends some of that money for me, some of it for you, some of it for his clerks, delivery men, the Postal Department, the public carriers, and for the whole city's activities in general. If advertising should cease every avenue of business would be paralyzed.

The advertiser is the motor. Turn off the switch and we go back again to primitive conditions.

The shrewd advertiser sees beyond his own doorstep and farther than the year's balance sheet. He is talking to people everywhere. Building up a reputation of his store and his merchandise. He is getting acquainted and getting his goods acquainted. He is keeping his name before the people.

When he buys space regularly in The Gazette he adds to his field practically everybody in this community.

He can buy space in the best, or the second best, or some very ordinary medium. It is for him to choose.

Circulation is of the greatest importance, and The Gazette has a circulation double that of all other daily and weekly papers in Janesville combined. It is without a doubt the best advertising medium. It reaches more people for less money oftener than any other medium. By using The Gazette columns the advertiser receives the benefit of association with successful merchants. He uses a medium with the prestige of unprecedented success; a medium of influence and of recognized merit, and it is these qualities which make a newspaper valuable as an advertising medium.

When a merchant adds a man to his staff he engages the very best ability available. When he adds a piece of machinery he buys the most up-to-date contrivance that is produced. When he adds Gazette advertising he tells about his goods and his service to the very best people he can get.

Some merchants engage high grade men and install high grade facilities to handle the business, and then throw advertising dodgers to anybody and everybody, into sewer-holes and under gutters and call it advertising. Some merchants don't even advertise at all, and others advertise only semi-occasionally.

The fact that your advertising appears continuously in a successful medium like The Gazette establishes public confidence. Your goods advance step by step in the estimation of thousands of people who may be months getting round to make the first purchase.

Advertising is an investment in public confidence and acquaintanceship which costs you nothing to keep going after you have established yourself, because of increased and ever increasing patronage.

An advertiser who adds our subscribers to his business adds the moral and commercial influence of over 32,000 consumers, each of whom stands for something progressive in his or her local circle.

You are free to add The Gazette to your business. To make it a part of your selling machinery. The toll is small in proportion to the service we know we can render.

If your teeth are in bad order no physician can do much for your general health until they are fixed.

Food decomposes very rapidly in the cavities of your teeth and breeds disease which passes into your stomach. Every meal adds more to it.

Delays mean that it will cost you more in the end. Have your teeth put in good sound shape at once.

Women in Thirteenth Century.
Father Pardow, a New York priest, says that in the thirteenth century there were women teaching in the Catholic universities. In the story of the mother of the Maccabees the Bible says she "joined a man's heart to a woman's thought," which shows that she, rather than man, was considered a person of intellect and capable of thought.

ANOTHER MISSING WOMAN LOCATED

Mrs. Fred Russell, Who Disappeared From the Mary Kimball Mission Friday, Is Back From Madison.

Rev. Mary Kimball this morning informed the police department and the district attorney that a young woman who had given her name as Mrs. Fred Russell and who had sought and received shelter at the mission on advice of Mrs. F. J. Hick, corner of Dodge and Academy streets, with whom she had been stopping for ten days prior to last Thursday, disappeared in a mysterious fashion shortly after noon on Friday and had not since been heard from.

Her personal effects, including a handbag, a dress suit case, and a trunk which was transferred from Mrs. Hick's home Friday afternoon, were all at the House of Refuge and the missionary thought it very strange that the girl should have taken leave without a word of explanation or any instructions as to the disposal of her baggage.

Unlabeled and Despondent

Though Mrs. Russell stated that she was married and that the time was approaching when she would require medical care and attention, she was without funds; that her husband had always been very kind to her; but that she feared he was about to desert her. She seemed very anxious about a letter which she was expecting, and after telephoning Mrs. Hick on Friday to the effect that she hoped soon to pay a small sum remaining due for her board and was going to send for her trunk, she departed for the postoffice. That was the last the missionary saw of her, though the trunk was delivered late in the afternoon.

Chief Appleby and District Attorney Fisher visited the mission this morning. The hanging disclosed a gold locket bearing the monogram "A. H.", a key to the trunk, some other trifles, a letter, and a postal. The letter was as follows:

Feb. 3, 1909.
Leave tomorrow for...
Please address me there...
I will write you a letter Sunday and come to Janesville as soon as possible. In haste, FRED RUSSELL.

The postal which was mailed on a Chicago-to-Milwaukee train on Feb. 5 at 8:30 a. m. was delivered at the mission after the young woman had left. It read as follows:

Friend Lillian:
I leave here for Janesville on the 1:35 p. m. train. Meet me at the depot.

What Trunk Disclosed

The trunk was neatly packed with a quantity of good quality wearing apparel, a pair of silver embossed, ebony-lined military hat-brushes done up in a Christmas packet with Merry Christmas greetings to "Fred," but obviously never delivered; a Bible and copies of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Satanstoe at Saratoga," a prescription written by Dr. Bradley at Madison; a flask of liquor; an alarm clock purchased in Racine; a souvenir silver dessert spoon from Milwaukee; a handsome wine for a hat; photographs of herself taken by A. Dan at Brandon, Wis., and a packet of letters largely addressed to Miss Lillian Hickford, 609 Hickory street, Milwaukee, Ill. There was a souvenir postcard from Ann Arbor, Mich., sent last June by an "Annie Stella," who gave her address as the Fleming block in the Michigan university city.

What Drayman Says

The young woman was about 23 years of age, fair-skinned and attractive looking, and very becomingly and tastefully dressed in blue. Rev. Mary Kimball fears that she has thrown herself in the river, but the officers, while preparing to make an investigation of the supposition, are inclined to take another view of the mystery.

Chief Appleby has located the drayman who delivered the trunk Friday afternoon. He is J. J. Hick, who resides on Locust street, an employee of the Schwartz transfer line. According to his statement a man and woman, both in apparently good spirits, entered Smith's drugstore, the headquarters for the dry line, about five o'clock Friday afternoon and made arrangements to have the baggage transferred, the man paying for the same. Mr. Hick described the man as about 25 years of age, smooth-shaven, 5 ft. 10 inches in height, wearing a brown suit and derby hat, and a black overcoat.

Returned from Madison

Just as the paper was going to press word was received from the police department to the effect that the missing woman had put in an appearance at the mission. She had been to Madison.

DEATH BY VIOLENCE SAYS JURY IN THE CRONIN TRAGEDY

Little Home on Western Avenue Has Been Ransacked and Abandoned—Widow Now Living on Bluff Street.

Though the little home on Western avenue which was tenanted by Michael Cronin and his wife prior to the former's death at the hands of an assassin on the night of Jan. 21, has undergone a thorough search, no more hoarded gold has been discovered, according to the statements of the widow and her daughter, Agnes, of New York, who returned here from Chicago last Friday. When officers visited the place on that date they looked over the place and struck it as curiously full of every possible hiding place in the walls and under the floors been investigated. Mrs. Cronin has now abandoned the house and has taken up her abode on Bluff street.

Burk's History Looked Up

This and other interesting facts were brought to light at the final session of the coroner's jury this morning. It appears that a careful inquiry has been made into the character and history of Burk, the Chicago Examiner's staff photographer, who came here about Christmas time and took a series of photographs of Mr. and Mrs. Cronin and their home, which pictures were subsequently published in that newspaper as well as in the Janesville Gazette. Burk, it appears, formerly worked on Hearst's New York paper and met Miss Agnes Cronin, while so employed. He was subsequently transferred to Chicago and came out here to take the pictures at her request. He is a young man about 27 years of age, of excellent character and address, and it does not appear that he and Miss Cronin were anything more than good friends.

Has Also Been Established

It has also been established that John Cronin was born in high regard at the leather establishment, where he had worked until some months ago; that he was comparatively out of employment at the time of the murder; and that he was conversing with friends in a Chicago grocery store on the night he received the message announcing his father's death. The presence of the son-in-law, Persons, at Deloit on the evening in question is also satisfactorily established.

A Lack of Harmony

There is a lack of harmony in the family, but this is something not uncommon. Mrs. Persons, though living nearby, is said not to have been home for a visit in fifteen years, up to last summer. America, the youngest child, now lives in Montana and has not been home since her departure 18 years ago. There is another daughter at Bridgeport, Conn., another at LaGrange, Ill., and still another elsewhere in the same neighboring state. The jurors after due consideration drew up and signed the following:

Verdict of the Jury

"An inquisition taken at the city of Janesville in the county of Rock on the 22d and 23d days of January, 1909, and on the 1st and 8th days of February, 1909, before Stanley D. Tallman, Esq., one of the justices of the peace in said county, upon the view of the body of Michael Cronin, there dead by the jurors whose names are hereunto subscribed, who are duly sworn to inquire in behalf of the state, in what manner and by what means the said Michael Cronin came to his death, upon their oath do say that the said Michael Cronin came to his death as the direct result of an assault by a party or parties unknown to this jury committed with a blunt instrument by striking the head which crushed the deceased's skull and from which assault the deceased had no chance to recover. That the said assault resulted in the death of Michael Cronin in the city of Janesville on the 21st day of January, 1909.

"We further believe that said assault was premeditated and in view of the serious result of the same, we recommend that the county and city authorities make every possible effort and spare no reasonable expense in the apprehension of the person or persons, unknown, who committed the crime.

ASKS INFORMATION AS TO RELATIVES

Writes Mayor Heddles, Wanting to Know Whereabouts of Former Residents of the City.

Three decades or more ago there lived in Janesville a man named William Hill, and his sisters, Jane and Mildred. Their names are not now in the city directory. Last week Mayor Heddles received the following letter in his mail:

"Dear Sir: I am very desirous of hearing from some of my relatives whom I have lost track of for many years. The last heard of them was that they lived in Janesville, Wis., thirty or thirty-five years ago; and I did not know whom to apply to until I was advised to write to you. Perhaps you can help me. The names are William Hill and sisters, Jane and Mildred.

"Their father is (or was) Thomas Hill, and their mother, Sara Sellers, of Pennsylvania. I would like to hear from any of them, or their descendants. This is nothing of importance—only a friendly desire to trace lost relatives. If you will kindly assist me, I will esteem it a great favor.

"Respectfully,
"MRS. ANNIE E. AURAND,
"16 Washington avenue,
"Altoona, Pa."

In regard to the three persons mentioned in this letter, Mayor Heddles desires that anyone who has information to furnish concerning them will communicate with him, or with the writer of the letter.

ENGINE TESTS WERE VERY SATISFACTORY

Trial of Working of New Fire Steamer Was Highly Commended by Master Mechanic Manion.

Saturday afternoon in front of the West Side fire station tests of the capacity and efficiency of the new fire steamer were conducted by Master Mechanic Thomas Manion of Milwaukee, who was sent here by Chicago Fire Police to conduct these tests. Mr. Manion has conducted the apparatus for conducting the examination and his report of the working of the engine is highly flattering and very satisfactory.

He found that under the conditions that would be met with in a time of fire the engine exceeded its rated capacity. In testing for slippage the engine proved absolutely perfect. Mr. Manion was astonished at this and made the remark that in his whole experience of thirty-five years in the Milwaukee department he had never seen this before.

This morning the big extension ladder was taken out for examination and trial.

MUST ENFORCE THE RULES OF OFFICE

Notice of Meetings for Lodges or Societies Must Be Written Out and Sent to the Gazette Office.

Secretaries of lodges and societies are requested to write out all notices of meetings they desire published and either mail them to the Gazette or leave them at the office. It entails a considerable loss of time and often results in mistakes in notices that are telephoned, so that in the future all announcements of this nature must be mailed or left in the office if they are to be published. This has been the rule in the office for several years, but has not been rigidly enforced during the past few months.

SCOTCH SINGER GAVE DELIGHTFUL CONCERT

Miss Jeannie Fletcher Sang Songs of the Land of the Thistle on Saturday Evening.

Deserving of a larger audience was Miss Jeannie Fletcher who, with her company of Scottish singers, dancers, monologists and instrumentalists, appeared at the "Myra's" theatre on Saturday evening. There was also a tenor in the company who was not a Scot, but a Greek, and he was well received and added to the strength of the troupe.

There was an element of freshness about the entire entertainment and the breadth of the highlands was pervasive in the happy melodies, the sword dances and the humorous monologues. The last mentioned feature had a rare tang to it, and was well come in these days of too much "nik-komahorus" dialect.

Miss Fletcher sang "The Banks of Loch Lomond" and a number of other simple and favorite highland ballads. J. H. Cameron's impersonation of a hardheaded Scotch divine was worth going many city blocks to see. Miss Florence Reid danced the highland fling and the sword dance and Miss Abby rendered a vocal selection from "Edna."

Miss Veronica Ferguson played Dr. Jekyll's "Souvenir" as a violin solo. Although there was nothing of the leather about either "Souvenir" or "Edna," they filled in on a program that was first rate.

HASKELL'S Boxing Review

And still others are being made almost weekly for Jim Jeffries to fight Jack Johnson. Some of the old timers are undoubtedly wishing they were back in their prime so that they might be eligible to accept one of the numerous offers now being made for a fight in which the heavyweight championship title is involved. When a $25,000 purse was offered ten and fifteen years ago the boxing world displayed surprise, but now one man—Jeffries—has received several offers of $50,000 for his own—win or draw.

Out in Nevada way, at a place called Maxima—which means money in Yiddish—they want the fight between Johnson and Jeffries. Now Orleans promoters are willing to pay a fortune for the fight. Sydney, Australia, is willing to put up $50,000 for Jeff's and London, England, is in readiness to pay over $50,000 for the bout, and now comes Baltimore, Md., the home of Aurelio Herrera, with a $50,000 inducement for the big fellows.

But Jeffries' hearing isn't very good—he can't hear the call in such shape to accept, but insists that he is out of the ring. Occasionally he intimates that he might reconsider the ring, but adds that there is nothing doing just now. Of course the general impres-son is that Jeff would get back into the game in a hurry if he thought he could get in shape and be in condition to give the black champion a beating.

However, there are some fans throughout the country who are now giving Jeffries more credit than he deserved when he was champion. They figure that by signing for a long theatrical engagement at a fancy show, he displays much wisdom. Jeff was never considered a shrewd business man so far as the boxing game is concerned, but later he learned the value of advertising and now he is profiting. The talk about Johnson and his statements about his own future all prove a good advertisement, and by doing stunts before the footlights he can make as much, or even more money, than by fighting the negro. In the meantime he can ascertain whether it is possible for him to get down to a fair weight and be in a position to give Johnson the kind of a fight expected of the retired champion.

For the present it is a certainty that Jeff and Johnson will not clash in the squared circle. Jeff's time is taken up with theatrical engagements and when his present contract expires he will probably sign another. In the meantime Johnson is in a far-off country where he is raking in the coin, looking well and evidently hoping Jeff is not the man he was some years ago.

All this talk about huge sums being offered for a go between Jeffries and Johnson recalls fortunes paid to boxers in ring contests. The Nelsons, the Pappas-Ketchel and other recent fights resulted in only fair sized purses as compared with the inducements offered for the present champion and the retired champion. But one can go back a few years and "dope" out that heavyweights of a few years ago didn't make much out of nothing. The Glasse-Nelson fight of 1906 brought nearly $70,000 into the Goldfield arena and of this sum the Harry made his way down the mountain in the blank and heavy dark, correcting his path by the lightning. He had faced squarely the question that in that dim room had become an imminent demand.

"What if I love her? What right have I to love her, with a wretched name like mine? She has refinement, a measure of wealth no doubt, and I am poor as poverty, dependent on the day's grubbing in the ditch for tomorrow's bacon and flour. Yet that would not stand in the way. I am no venal rogue, angling for the loaves and fishes. Whatever else she cursed me with, nature gave me a brain, and culture and experience have educated it. With hand or brain I can have my own niche to stand in."

So he had argued, but his argument ended always with the same stern and unanswerable conclusion: "To drag her down in order to lift myself! Because she pities me—pity is akin to love—shall I take advantage of her interest and innocence?"

In the cabin through the long hours till the dawn began to infiltrate the dark hollows of the wood he had lain wide eyed, thinking. When day came he had cooked his breakfast and thereafter sat watching the havoc of the storm through the window. Hours passed thus before the fury of the wind had spent itself. At length he rose, threw open the door and stood looking out upon the wind whipped foliage and the drab desolation of the fog. Then he threw on his Mackinaw coat, picked up his gold pan and climbed down the slope. Beneath all other problems must lie the world's problem of his daily food. He had uncovered a crevice in the bed rock at the end of his trench the day before, and now he scraped a puff of the soggy gravel. It contained and carried it back to the cabin.

With a sigh he took off his damp coat and threw a log on the fire. He abstractedly watched it kindle, then filled and lit his pipe and turned to the bookshelf. He ran his hand absently along the row. Where had been that wide, dim expanse of library walls that hovered like a mirage beyond his visual sight? He chose a volume he had been reading and turned the pages.

All at once his hand clutched. He gave a choked cry. He was staring at a crumpled bank draft bearing his own name—a draft across whose face was written in the cramped hand resembling the signature a word that seemed etched in black characters of shame—"Forgery!"

"Pay to Hugh Stiles—the sum of $5,000." He read the phrase in a hoarse, husky monotone, every rebelling nerve, his body hot with the heat of a forge. There it was, a hideous chapter of it, the damnable truth from which he had shrunk!

Oh the town knew! He snatched at the draft and read the date. More than a year ago, and it had been presented for payment in a distant city, the city near which he had been picked up beside the railroad track. The forged name was the same as his own. Who was David Stiles? His father? Had that city been his home once and that infamous act the forerunner of his flight or exile? He looked at the paper again with painful intensity. It was canceled, therefore had been paid without question. Yet the man it had robbed had stamped it with that venomous hallmark. Clearly the law had not stepped in, for here he was at liberty, owning his name. He had been let go, then, absolved, to carry his badge of crime here into the wilderness! And how had he lived since then?

He stumbled to a chair and sat down, his frame rigid. He thought of the robbed stolen in the gulch below, of his own unhappy adventure of the night. How could he tell what he had done—what he might do? Minutes went by as he sat motionless, his mind catching strange kaleidoscopic pictures that fled past him into the void. At length he rose and went to the window. Far down the hillside a faint line through the mist spanned the gulch bottom. A groan burst from his lips.

"That is the hydraulic mine," he said aloud. "Gold has been stolen there in the past again and again. Some was stolen two nights ago. How do I know but that I am the thief? Was that what Prendergast had meant by the 'safe way to beat the game?' A silver ran over him. 'How do I know?' he thought. 'I can see the self—the evil side of me—when the dark had fallen waking and active. I see myself creeping down there, stealing from shadow to shadow, to scoop the gold from the ridges when the moon is under a cloud. I see men shifting from dark to daylight with loaded rifles across their knees watching. I see a flash of fire. I hear a report. I see myself there by the sluice boxes, dead, shot down in the net of a thief, making good the name men know me by."

The figure of Jessica came before him, standing in her soft white gown, her hand against her cheek and the jasmine odors about her. The dream he had dreamed could not be—never, never! All that was left was surrender, ignominious flight to scenes barren of suggestion.

At that instant a shining point caught his eye. It came from the pan of gravel on the doorstep, on which the rain had been beating. He thrust the draft into his pocket and seized a double handful of the gravel. He held it to the light. It sparkled with coarse, yellow flakes of gold. He dropped the handful with a sharp exclamation, threw on his coat and rushed from the cabin.

All day, alone on the fog soaked hillside, Harry toiled in the trench without food or rest.

It was a fair, sweet evening, and the room where Jessica sat beside David Stiles' bed, lending aloud to him, was flooded with the falling sunlight. Since the old man's seizure in the night he had been much worse, and she had scarcely left his room. Today, however, he had sat propped by pillows, able to read and chat, and the deep personal anxiety that had numbed her had yielded.

A knock came at the door. It was a nurse with letters for him from the mail, and while he opened them Jessica laid aside the book and went slowly down the hall to the sun parlor, where the doctor stood with the group gathered after the early supper, chatting of the newest "strike" on the mountain.

"We'll be famous if we keep on," he was saying as she looked out of the wide windows across the haze where the sunlight drifted down in dust of gold. "I've a mind to stake out a claim myself."

"We pay you better," said one of the occupants gravely. "Anyway, the whole of Smoky mountain was staked in the excitement a year ago. There's no doubt about this fact, I suppose?"

"It's on exhibition at the bank," the doctor replied, "more than $5,000 cashed in a crevice in the glacier ago as near as a Christmas stocking."

The talk went on about her. "Where is the lucky claim?" some one asked.

"Just below this ridge," the doctor replied. "It is called the 'Little Paymaster'."

The name caught her ear. The Little Paymaster? That was the name on the two—on Hugh's claim! At that instant she thought she heard David Stiles calling. She turned and ran quickly up the long hall to his open door.

The sight of his face at first startled her, for it was held captive of emotion, but it was an emotion of joy, not of pain. A letter fluttered in his grasp.

"He thrust it into her hands. 'Jessica,' he exclaimed, 'Hugh has paid it! He has sent the $5,000, interest and principal, to the bank to my account.'"

For a moment she stood transfixed. The talk she had mechanically heard tapered into insignificance, and her mind ran back to the hour when she had left the draft at the cabin. She caught the old man's hand and knelt by his chair, laughing and crying at once. During these last few days the impulse to tell all that she had concealed had been almost irresistible. Now the barrier had fallen. The secret she had repressed so long came forth in a rush of sentences that left him mute and amazed.

"I should have told you before," she ended, "but I didn't know—I wasn't sure." She broke down for very joy.

He looked at her with eyes immovably bright. "Tell me everything, Jessica!" he said. "Everything, from the beginning!"

"He was young and irresponsible," Jessica said the old man. "Money always came so easily. He didn't realize what he was doing when he signed that draft. He has learned a lesson out in the world. It won't hurt his career in the end, for no one but you and I and one other knows it. Thank God! If his memory comes back—"

"Oh, it will!" she breathed. "It must! That day on the Knoll he only needed the clue! When I told him who I am he will know me. He will remember it all. I am sure—sure! Will you let me bring him to you?" she asked softly.

"Yes," he said, pressing her hand. "Tomorrow, I shall be stronger than."

She rose and lighted the lamp, shading it from his eyes.

"Do you remember the will, Jessica?" he asked her presently. "The will I drew the day he came back? You never knew, but I signed it—the night of your wedding. Harry Sanderson was right, my dear, wasn't he? 'I wish now I hadn't signed it, Jessica,' he added. 'I must set it right. I must set it right.' He watched her

In the Millenium.
The probability is that, if there were a city composed of none but good men, it would be an object of competition to avoid the possession of power, just as now it is to obtain it; and then it would become clearly evident that it is not the nature of the genuine ruler to look to his own interest, but to those of his subject; so that every judicious man would choose to be a recipient of benefits, rather than to have the trouble of conferring them upon others.—Plato.
